Greetings!

We haven't seen this much upheaval in our healthcare system for decades. With the advent of Obamacare, its attendant shifts in medical delivery, patient displacement, and ubiquitous uncertainties - to all this is now added scandals rocking the VA, at one time arguably one of the better healthcare delivery models.

There is a lesson to be learned in all of this turbulence. I wonder if you will think it is the same lesson I see. Read my blog post The VA Scandals: An opportunity for learning - if we are willing, and let me know your thoughts.

Thank you for your partnership in creating a medical model that works for all, with freedom as a foundation for excellence.

Best Regards,

Beth Haynes, MD
Executive Director

OSU Debate: Allowing a market for organs would benefit both patients and donors.

Over 70 faculty, students, and interested parties attended the May 22nd BRI debate held at The Ohio State University College of Medicine. The debate centered on the ethics and economic feasibility of allowing both live and cadaveric organs to be sold instead of donated. Dr. Mark Cherry, and OSU Transplant Pulmonologist debated Dr. Amy Pope-Harman. The Arthur N. Rupe Foundation co-sponsored this event.
