

Brennan Wright, BRI-President, The Ohio State University College of Medicine

... gets inspiring counsel from a Direct Pay, Transparent Pricing doctor

Greetings!

September 28, 2015

Brennan Wright, BRI-President from The Ohio State University College of Medicine, was one of 10 BRI student leaders who attended Free Market Medicine Association's (FMMA) 2nd annual conference last month in Oklahoma City. Brennan met and had an in-depth discussion with Dr. Matt Davis, who shared generously of his experience as a private pay orthopedic surgeon in Alabama.

Dr. Davis's story of his transition from a group practice encumbered by bureaucracy, long hours and dissatisfaction, to his own private pay practice has a happy ending -- one that resonates with many medical students across the country, and especially BRI students.

What are some of the benefits doctors like Matt Davis extoll in their private, direct pay practices?

- * More time to spend with patients
- * More time to spend with family
- * More time dedicated to business development
- * More patient satisfaction
- * Less hours, less cost to patients, and more income to his practice!

Don't these benefits sound surprisingly similar to the overall beneficial results of free market medicine?

BRI thanks ALL the generous donors who made our student leaders' attendance at FMMA possible!
