BRI's Leadership Conference 2016

... so they can continue doing amazing work for healthcare freedom!

Greetings!

January 25, 2016

It all starts with a spark.

It could start with the spark you feel when you read about freedom, free markets, or entrepreneurship. Or, the spark you feel when you hear ideas for the first time that just make sense, giving you insight into solutions outside currently accepted norms. It could start with the spark you feel when the way things are going just doesn't seem right, and you know there must be a better way.

BRI flames that spark into knowledge and skills, empowering medical students to take their learning and understanding to the next level of action. Our goal is to empower them to become Doctor-Leaders and Doctor-Advocates.

At BRI's annual Leadership Conference, medical students learn to understand healthcare policy as it is, and how it could be under a free market system. The conference helps them fulfill their desire to help people, and also to have great lives as doctors.

You can help a deserving medical student attend BRI's Leadership Conference 2016. It costs approximately $1000 per student to attend, including transportation, hotel, meals and materials.

The button below will take you to our Membership & Donations application, where you can make an additional contribution and earmark it for a student to attend the conference. Please give as generously as you can. Thank you.

BRI Students' accomplishments

BRI students continue to participate in leadership activities beyond the conference. Several have held coveted internships with well-known free market think tanks. Others have written policy papers that have directly influenced state healthcare legislation. And every month, these bright, passionate students produce BRI events to help spread the word about healthcare freedom and the importance of preserving the doctor-patient relationship.

Haran Sivakumar, BRI-Icahn president, on the importance of medical students understanding healthcare policy.
