Who do YOU know that should attend our BRI- Leadership Conference 2015 in Washington, D.C.?

Greetings!

The sad truth is that most medical students accept the government-centric healthcare reform promulgated on today's college and medical school campuses. Those students who disagree need our support. They need to know that BRI exists and what we stand for: the doctor-patient relationship and healthcare freedom. They need to know that they are not alone. BRI members, supporters and our amazing students work hard every day to promote freedom in medicine, but we need even more.

Help us connect with students and colleagues who share our desire to empower doctors and patients to preserve personalized medical care of their own choosing.

What medical and pre-med students, speakers and professionals do you know who could benefit from affiliating with our cause? What students do you know who feel alone amidst the overwhelming liberal push? Please forward this email to them. Let them know they're not alone, and are warmly welcome to participate with us, to start a BRI Chapter, or hold a BRI-sponsored event on their campus.

Your efforts at helping us connect are vital to our success.

Any student(s) who officially start a new BRI Chapter on their campus by the end of 2014 - and complete a few simple eligibility requirements - will get two FULL scholarships per Chapter to attend next year's BRI-Leadership Conference in Washington, D.C.

Thank you for your continued support.

In partnership,

Beth Haynes, MD

Students gain from holding debates and attending conferences

BRI Student Leaders across the country are not only holding debates, but attending conferences and other organizations' events, too. They are meeting speakers and professionals who are profoundly knowledgeable in medicine, healthcare, and business. These are information packed and eye-opening opportunities for our students and also afford them the chance to make valuable connections. Perhaps you know a great speaker, or are one yourself. If you would like to join our Speakers Bureau, please contact us.
