

Dear ,

As another academic year rolls around for new and returning medical students, I reflect on everything that medical school demands. As someone who completed medical training and who made BRI part of your life, I wanted to reach out to you personally to say thanks. Whether it was in a big or small way, your being part of BRI helped bring us to where we are today.

We accomplished so much with you! I am grateful for your partnership in preserving the precious patient-doctor relationship by standing for free market healthcare policies.

Please don't lose touch with BRI. I think you'll be so pleased--and possibly surprised--but most certainly proud of everything we've accomplished.

Our 2016-2017 End of Year Report will be published shortly, and we'd be honored to send you a copy so that you can see for yourself how far BRI has come, and know that you were a part of it.

Please let us know where you are and what you're doing now! Shoot me a quick email with an updated address (so we can send you a report!) and phone # (if you like), and let me know where you're practicing and what you're up to.

It is my honor to have worked with you, and I would be thrilled if you would stay in touch with me and all of us here at BRI.

Thank you most sincerely for your time, talent and dedication. We wish you every success in the next phases of your life!

Sincerely,

Beth Haynes, MD
Medical Director

P.S. Are you following BRI on Facebook? If not, be sure to "like" our page and join in an ongoing conversation on the latest issues in healthcare policy.

